I²SL's Global Community: A Market of Sustainable Laboratory Professionals

Are you looking for the right product or firm to help you build or retrofit your sustainable laboratory?

Or are you a manufacturer or service provider searching for laboratory owners interested in creating a sustainable facility?

Find your match on the International Institute for Sustainable Laboratories' (I²SL) Global Community, an online market for sustainable laboratory professionals. Read on to learn more, or visit www.i2sl.org/globalcommunity.

Where Do You Fit In?

I²SL's Global Community includes two main categories: Providers and Owners.

Providers include manufacturers, architects, engineers, and others who can provide sustainable laboratory products and services to owners.

Owners include universities, industry, and federal laboratory owners and operators in need of sustainable laboratory products and services.

Both Providers and Owners can join I²SL's Global Community by filling out the application, available at www.i2sl.org/globalcommunity/join.html.

Providers

The product and service Providers section of the Global Community includes architects, planners, engineers, manufacturers, and related individuals and companies that can help design and build a sustainable laboratory facility.

By submitting a completed application form and paying an annual subscription fee of $1,000, Provider organizations will be listed on I²SL's

PROVIDER CATEGORIES

Owners can search for highly qualified professional providers in the following categories:

- Architects
- Commissioning agents
- Energy professionals
- Engineers
- Manufacturers
- Nonprofit organizations
- Water professionals

Global Community page. This Provider Web page of the Global Community will be available to the general public, free of charge. Increase your sustainable laboratory business opportunities by listing your organization, products, and services in this exclusive directory.
