2017 Conference Highlights and Looking Ahead to the 2018 I<sup>2</sup>SL Annual Conference

This year's conference was a resounding success, in part due to the hard work and stellar planning efforts by the New England Chapter. Feedback from attendees indicate that the conference was a wonderful opportunity to network and learn more about advancements in sustainable technology. We at I<sup>2</sup>SL HQ are appreciative of the New England Chapter's work for this year's conference and look forward to collaborating with the North Carolina-Triangle Chapter on the 2018 I<sup>2</sup>SL Annual Conference in Raleigh, North Carolina!

Missed joining us at this year's conference? Below are a few highlights:

This year's Opening Plenary keynote speaker, Matthew A. Beaton, Massachusetts Secretary of Energy and Environmental Affairs, provided remarks regarding energy efficiency and sustainability in the Boston area.

The Opening Plenary included two panel sessions: one on climate leadership and the role of public/private partnerships (pictured above) and another with academic and senior executives about cost-effective laboratory research.

Exhibitors showcased their technologies, services, and systems during this year's Technology and Services Fair.

The 2017 Go Beyond and North American Freezer Challenge Award winners were recognized during an awards dinner on Monday night.

Attendees toured high-tech buildings, including Northeastern University's Integrated Science and Engineering Complex.

Nick Caronna, president of the North Carolina-Triangle Chapter, receives a Boston Red Sox hat and bat from Jim Blount, president of the New England Chapter, to pass on the conference planning baton.
